The Colourful Portrait

DESIGN STORY

Frida Kahlo (1907–1954) was an iconic cultural figure who left a lasting mark on the art world through her instantly recognizable self-portraits. Her work was deeply personal, drawing from her rich inner world shaped by politics, activism, and her Mexican heritage.

Throughout her career, Frida produced countless paintings, each filled with symbolism that uncovered hidden meanings and reflected her life and experiences. We wanted to capture that same spirit in The Colourful Portrait, a design created in-house by our Graphics team. Inspired by Frida Kahlo's background and legacy, this vibrant tribute features butterflies as symbols of rebirth and resilience, a recurring theme throughout her work.

Born in Coyoacán, Mexico City, Frida began painting after a devastating bus accident at 18 that left her permanently disabled. During her recovery, she discovered her passion for small-scale autobiographical portraits. Although she had always loved painting, her accident was a turning point, acting as a creative outlet and emotional escape.

An inseparable part of Frida's story is her tumultuous relationship with Diego Rivera. Another one of Mexico's most famous painters, Rivera met Frida when she was 15 and recognized her talent early on, encouraging the uniqueness of her work. After marrying Rivera in 1929, Frida shifted her personal and artistic style. She began to wear the traditional Tehuana dress that soon became her trademark: flowered headdress, loose blouse, long ruffled skirt, and gold jewellery.

Frida's work continued to evolve over the years, becoming more deeply rooted in her culture and identity. Her artwork grew to reflect a bold vision of Mexican nationalism, connected to Mexico's contemporary indigenous culture and her commitment to preserving Mexicanidad, the unique essence of being Mexican that encompasses identity, pride, and a profound connection to history. In 1938, she travelled to the United States without Rivera and made a striking impression on the art world. Her debut show was a success, with her bright, traditional Mexican outfits drawing a crowd.

Since then, Frida has inspired generations, not only artists and art lovers, but anyone who has suffered through tragedy. Her work resonates with those navigating pain, identity, and self-expression. Even in her final years, she managed to paint prolifically and remained politically active.

Frida Kahlo died young at age 47, but her legacy lives on. She remains a powerful symbol of resilience, creative defiance, and emotional honesty. Her lasting spirit and passion for creating art continue to move and inspire us, and we are delighted to feature her in this season's collection.

Historical Context & Cultural Significance:

- The Book of Kells is one of the artefacts most widely associated with Irish national identity and culture. An illuminated manuscript that spreads the message of Christianity, its embellished pages elevate it beyond a book to be read, making it a true work of art.
- Created in a monastery in Iona, Scotland, the manuscript later travelled to Kells, Co. Meath before arriving in Dublin in the 17th century, where it now resides in Trinity College.
- Visited daily, it continues to be admired by all who appreciate Irish culture, heritage, and creativity. Its intricate artwork draws people into the Old Library and creates a strong connection between the present day and medieval Ireland.

Design Details & Fun Facts:

- We originally released this design in 1998 as a handstitched hardcover journal with the title Generatio. We are delighted to bring the design back 28 years later!
- Our design features the most famous page of the manuscript, the Chi Rho page. The letters on the design represent the Chi, Rho, and Iota, which are abbreviations of Christ’s name in Greek.

Target Audience:

- People who loved our original 1998 handstitched hardcover journal and will be happy to see this design return in different formats.
- People with an appreciation for Irish art, history, and culture.
- People who enjoyed our Cartoon Saloon series and The Secret of Kells design, as the film centres around the illuminated manuscript.

The Book of Kells is one of the artefacts most widely associated with Irish national identity and culture. Described by James Joyce as “the most purely Irish thing we have,” the illuminated manuscript has a long and complex history, one that has been retold and preserved since its creation in the 9th century.

The Book of Kells has had a difficult, even traumatic life since its production in a monastery in Iona, Scotland. Its journey continued to Kells, Ireland, until its eventual arrival in Dublin in the 17th century. While some pages are missing, and the manuscript has suffered some wear and tear over the years, it has remained remarkably intact given its great age.

Although it spreads the message of Christianity by recounting the four Gospels, this richly illuminated and illustrated text is considered less a book to be read and more a work of art to inspire awe in God. At the time of its creation, literacy was rare, so the beautiful imagery and detailed illustrations were vital for communicating Christian teachings.

We have chosen the most famous page of the manuscript, the Chi Rho page, for our design. This illumination begins with the words “XPI autem generatio . . .” The letters XPI that form the primary page elements are, respectively, the Chi, the Rho, and the Iota. These three letters are used as the abbreviated form of Christ’s name in Greek, and open that passage from Matthew in Latin, the language most often used in medieval manuscripts. Also shown is the phrase “Christi autem generatio,” which is Latin for “the birth of Christ.” “Christi” and “autem” can be seen hidden within the motif, and “generatio,” which was the inspiration behind the naming of our design, is written out at the bottom of the page.

This is the most richly decorated page in the book, filled with hidden symbols and elaborate embellishments that exemplify the awe-inspiring, deeply personal beauty of the Insular art style seen throughout the manuscript. Created by monastics, this medieval manuscript now resides in Trinity College Dublin. Due to conservation concerns, the displayed pages of The Book of Kells are rotated several times a year. Visited daily, it continues to be admired by all who appreciate Irish culture, heritage, and creativity. Its intricate artwork still draws people into the Old Library and creates a strong connection between the present day and medieval Ireland.

The Book of Kells continues to influence Irish art. From coins and stamps to murals and traditional Irish dance costumes, it remains Ireland’s greatest cultural treasure. We’ve been inspired by its rich history and how it continues to spark creativity even after more than a thousand years.

Originally released under the name Generatio as a handstitched hardcover journal in 1998, we are delighted to creatively reimagine the design, giving it new life while still rooted in the original folio design from The Book of Kells.

Golden Fritillaria

DESIGN STORY

Rooted in the cultural fabric of the city, The New York Botanical Garden has been a connective hub among people, plants, and the planet since 1891. Our Golden Fritillaria design, created in collaboration with NYBG, captures this spirit by spotlighting the decorative Fritillaria imperialis flower, alongside an iconic glass conservatory.

The original artwork can be found in the 1827 French botanical book Choix des plus belles fleurs (“Selection of the Most Beautiful Flowers”), a collection of 144 watercolour plates by renowned botanical illustrator Pierre-Joseph Redouté. An artist once known as “the Raphael of Flowers,” he has captured the essence of nature’s beauty with his hand-coloured plates, which were then published as copper engravings.

In this design blooms the Fritillaria imperialis, also known as the Crown Imperial, with its royal poise and uncommon charm. Native to the Middle East, this regal, lily-like plant was one of the first ornamental species cultivated by humans. Historical accounts suggest it was grown in gardens from Constantinople to Vienna as early as 1570. Despite its beauty, with its crown of green leaves above a ring of hanging, bell-shaped yellow blossoms, this plant emits an unusual odour that repels insects and pests. Thankfully, our design offers only its visual charm, one that is certain to attract.

Echoing the botanical elegance of the noble plant is the architectural grace found in a conservatory sketch designed by Lord & Burnham, America’s premier glasshouse firm since 1849. Created for the estate of William Fox (1879–1955), founder of the Fox Film Corporation, this conservatory was part of his Long Island estate built in the early 20th century. Lord & Burnham, who designed this glass palace, left a lasting legacy on the world of botanical architecture, with their most iconic creation being the Enid A. Haupt Conservatory at The New York Botanical Garden. This Victorian-style glasshouse remains a crown jewel of the Garden, acting as a sanctuary where visitors can explore the joy, beauty, and respite of nature.

We are delighted to work with NYBG to share nature’s beauty through this first collaborative stationery series. This collection supports NYBG’s work in plant research and conservation, horticulture, and education.

FOURTH

Taking the literary world by storm with the release of Fourth Wing in 2023, Rebecca Yarros reignited the romantasy genre for a whole new generation of readers. The book's widespread appeal and instant bestseller status, including topping the Sunday Times and New York Times lists, reflect its significant cultural footprint and the genre's resurgence.

Set in a dystopian world where dragon riders play a crucial role in the defense of their realm, the Empyrean series centers around Violet Sorrengail, a 20-year-old recruit who is thrust into the harsh realities of the Basgiath War College. Despite her physical challenges, including a genetic disorder that affects her joints, Violet's journey is one of resilience and strategic brilliance. As she navigates the brutal training required to become a dragon rider, her character defies traditional fantasy tropes, offering readers a female hero who is both formidable and deeply human.

Yarros' ability to craft complex characters and intricate worlds has endeared her to a broad audience, even beyond traditional fans of the romance and fantasy genres. Her exploration of themes such as resilience, identity, and the power of relationships resonates deeply with readers, particularly through the lens of Violet's challenges and growth. As Yarros continues to push the boundaries of genre fiction, her work not only entertains but also challenges and expands our understanding of what fantasy literature can be.

In interviews, Yarros has emphasized the importance of creating a world where characters, despite their vulnerabilities, rise to meet immense challenges, underscoring that true strength is not just physical and lies in both heart and mind. The series also stands out for its diverse representation. By featuring characters with disabilities, like Violet, and members of the LGBTQ community, Yarros challenges traditional notions of heroism in fantasy literature. This inclusivity has struck a chord with readers, many of whom have longed to see themselves reflected in the stories they love.

The cultural impact of the Empyrean series is further amplified by its active and engaged fan community. Online platforms, like BookTok, have come alive with discussions of the series, and fans have created theories, fan art, and even their own stories inspired by Violet's journey.

Given the monumental success of the Empyrean series, it's only fitting to celebrate this watershed work with a special collection. We are thrilled to partner with Rebecca Yarros and Red Tower Publishing through our collaboration with Hachette UK to bring the magic of Violet's world to the Paperblanks collection. This first release encapsulates all the seductive and mysterious magic of the book series, and we hope it will, in some way, inspire your own magical romance.

In 2026 Paperblanks is taking an important step towards an eco-friendlier future. We are delighted to announce that selected canvas bags in our Fall 2026 collection will be manufactured using a new sustainable material made from recycled plastic bottles.

This circular production process transforms waste into a durable, high-quality fabric, managing the journey from recycled materials to the finished product. With sustainability at the core of what we do, especially as a stationery brand, we are continually looking for ways to reduce our carbon footprint without compromising the premium look and feel of our products.

Through this new partnership, we believe we are delivering on both of our core values: creating beautiful products while making more responsible choices for the future.

Building on our existing pen loops, we are reinventing the product with a fresh look and with new additions to the Paperblanks product category.

Using some of our beloved designs such as Jane Austen, Persuasion, and The Little Prince, we've created pen loops that retain the original elements we know our Paperblanks community will love.

We have developed five designs for this release, including special editions of our Shadows of Navarre, Phantom of the Opera, and Legends of Hogwarts designs.

Target Audience:

- Fans of our current pen loops.
- People working in different sectors who need to keep their pen safe while on the go.
- Stationery lovers who pride themselves on owning stylish stationery products.
